

CONTRIBUTORS/COLLABORATEURS

Joseph B. Glass has taught in the Department of Geography and served as academic coordinator of the Halbert Center for Canadian Studies at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. He is the author of From New Zion to Old Zion, American Jewish Immigration and Settlement in Palestine, 1917-1939 (Detroit, 2002). His current research focuses on the impact of terrorism on the urban landscape of Jerusalem.

Roderick MacLeod is director of the Quebec Protestant Education Research Project at McGill University and the co-author with Mary Ann Poutanen of the forthcoming volume, A Meeting Of The People: School Boards and Protestant Communities in Quebec, 1801-1998.

Richard Menkis is associate professor at the University of British Columbia, cross-appointed to the Department of History and to Classical, Near Eastern and Religious Studies. He is the founding editor of Canadian Jewish Studies/Etudes juives canadiennes. He is currently editing, with Norman Ravvin, a reader of the Canadian Jewish experience, and working on a study of the writing of Canadian Jewish history.

Peter Neary is the co-editor (with J.L. Granatstein) of The Good Fight: Canadians and World War II (Toronto: Copp Clark, 1995) and of The Veterans Charter and Post-World War II Canada (Montreal & Kingston: McGill-Queen's University Press, 1998). He teaches at the University of Western Ontario.

Mary Ann Poutanen is an adjunct professor in the Department of History at Concordia University and the co-author with Roderick MacLeod of the forthcoming volume, A Meeting Of The People: School Boards and Protestant Communities in Quebec, 1801-1998.

Randal F. Schnoor received his doctorate in sociology at McGill University and specializes in the social scientific study of contemporary North American Jewry. His areas of recent research are the social and economic sustainability of Hasidic communities in Canada and constructions of identity among gay Jewish men. He has served as conference programme chair for the Association for Canadian Jewish Studies.

Henry Srebrnik teaches comparative politics and ethnic relations at the University of Prince Edward Island, Charlottetown. He has published a book and a number of articles on Jewish involvement in Communist movements in Britain and North America. He is now writing a volume tentatively titled, Sweet Dreams are Made of This: Diaspora Nationalism, Birobidzhan and the Jewish Communist Imagination.